DID YOU KNOW...

Only 6,000 of his estimated 13,000 pages of writing remain. The missing 7,000 pages formed the basis for "Da Vinci's Demons", covering the period during his mid-twenties.

To this day, no one knows who da Vinci's mother was. Some say she was a local peasant, but recent, unsubstantiated theories purport she was a Turkish slave. One thing that is known is that she left Leonardo at a very young age.

He studied the flight of birds closely, and used his observations to draw designs for a number of flight-related inventions including prototypes of the parachute and helicopter.

Between Milan and Florence, da Vinci painted the Mona Lisa, his most iconic painting, and arguably the most recognizable in the world. At the time, it set the standard for portraits.
